I am all ears to hear your idea sjkted. I offered a solution. I don't think it would turn into Avalon because only a few examples need be set. Do you not see a need to ban someone at some point? BTW, I have been a member of Avalon since 2009, and when the whole charlies affair took place I called it BS but life got in the way so to speak. So, I was not around for the mass jumping of ship.

btw, I feel Nexus and PA and PC are under attack again. I think it's coordinated and not necessarily intentionally at all 3. I have prayed for several members here.

But, the question is how do we determine who gets a warning and a ban? Are we supposed to come up with a long list of rules that are enforced by judges, community pleadings, and juries or should we just appoint a dictator?

In every case (note the URL), it is the Nexus Vbulletin software that is serving up the irritating webpages.

It's easy to see how I could make a mistake in accusing Celine and Richard of dirty tricks. It could happen to anyone.

FWIW, I, too, received the inaccessible page when I tried to log in. It occurred on Superbowl Sunday, right? I figured it was internet overload or something; then when I could access ESPN, I figured Nexus was down. At no point did it ever occur to me that there were any shenanigans going on ... and precisely because this type of thing happens from time to time (even during times of calm when Nexus is not beset by bad energies).

Still, you took the first resort Chico of publicly accusing Richard ... and to me, that fueled the fire. A moderator is supposed to put out fires, not fuel 'em or fan 'em. It just confirmed right then and there that serious trust issues existed between you and Richard (issues which could have been handled better by both sides, true enough, but Richard didn't make a false accusation against you so the righteousness is on his side).

Now that you have admitted your mistake in your false accusation, we have an opportunity to move forward. Let's not waste a further moment mitigating the seriousness of the mistake - and it was very serious, IMO - by explaining its genesis.

You want a community to oppose the pyramid system? Then here is your community: Nexus. If you perceive that Nexus is a pyramid like any other forum, then work to flatten it down. We may never flatten it to an ideal planar state as is our desire ... but that just means we have to be eternally vigilant in pounding it down each time it attempts to erect itself in a pyramid state. The planar design is an ideal ... a guiding design ... but it can never be implemented as such due to human failing. <----- So we do the best we can.

I implore members on both sides of this bad energy to throw away the whip and help with the oars. There are much bigger issues out there. There are threads out there that deserve our attention (if we want to be fully awakened).

Luke's thread, for instance: <http://nexus.2012info.ca/forum/showt...arle-Mises-org>

This is NOT intended to be sarcastic or ill willed and stems from the terms "Vacation" and "Naughty Chair" So this really IS Kindergarden then, and there has to be someone to enforce that the "brat" actually goes there, and STAYS there. Am I wrong here in my ASSUMPTION that possibly we humans just can't get it together? We have ongoing darts and spears flying because people can't seem to forgive and forget. What good is it to forgive if you harbor ongoing ill will? WOW, the names I could type here.

The case with Chico was a prime example: He was honestly trying to figure out what happened, and came to the conclusion that "someone" pulled the plug, and being concerned, he declared what he concluded. When he admitted his major blunder...and even asked for "forgiveness", he was told "I forgive IF...also, "I will never forgive...". Chico is now an outcast....because of why? Perhaps that is an example for us all as maybe we aren't really capable of actually tolerating others beyond our comfort zone, much less forgiving, in which case we are dead in the water, as nothing else will "hold water" for us.

Serenity, if people feel "under attack", could it be because we need to be confronted with something within us before we have any business going beyond ourselves? We can't be the enemy and think we can join together against an enemy and survive.

Yes, that was our first assumption as well. I could log-in repeatedly with no problem, but Andy couldn't. Andy suggested I try logging in with his user ID and password, which I did. Keep in mind that I was doing this from a different location than Andy, using a different IP address, with a different computer, and running different software. Logged in as Andy, I had the same problems Andy did. I could then log-in as Chico and have no problems. The issue was clearly associated with Andy's log-in ID, which pointed immediately to the MU mod. There was no other explanation.

I too was thrown off by other Nexus members saying, "It happened to me, too". In fact, that argument, coming from both Danielle and Charles in the Nexus Group chat, was the argument that convinced me that I had made a mistake, which is why I offered my quick retraction.

However, I have since learned more. The MU mod, once triggered, is reported to have a bug that causes some users not on the MU list to experience the same problems! This could be caused by subtle programming errors in the MU mod code, like not clearing the "annoy" flag properly somewhere in the code once it has been set.

Given all that information, the conclusion that the MU mod was being used in the Vbulletin software, under the control of a code-savvy administrator, was inescapable.

I'm still trying to figure out where my error was. Can you help me?

Hi Céline, I have been "here" for almost 6 decades trying to understand humanity. Are humans running the show here? Then the answer would have to be that there IS a problem. I am not trying to finger point, as I am well aware of how many finger would point my way in the process. Are WE not trying to figure out what is true and what is false? Are WE not trying to find PEACE together? Well then, WE must take a good look and make sure we don't throw out the baby with the bathwater if we plan to better other attempts at achieving a planar design that actually might work. Such designs can only exist when the builders are in harmony. We have to have HARMONY, and that is no easy achievement. On a personal note...I LOVE harmony. Harmony is great stuff....we just need to get it (somehow).

assumption convenient to vendetta, without sound fact checking to test a thesis, further exploration for evidence to support it, communication outside the channels of suspicion to avoid bias

all in understanding of the current emotional volatility of the nexus atmosphere which can be said to have been propagated by you to an opinionated degree

(possible) observation that even if wrong, that this would still fuel the flames of drama in the anticipation of desired conflict for the sake of growth in your own comfort zone yet willingly blind to it being outside of others in an attempt to demonize the staff more so than has already been accomplished through comparisons to a genocidal controlling world elite, controlling mental patients in a ward here at nexus (as an extreme example you used in your tranquility base thread)

all just my opinion of course, but I think you choose your extreme examples well as they accomplish the reactions you are searching for, like a vivisectionist looking for "truth" without regard for those you use to find it

Chico, you must admit that you umped to conclusions initially. And since there was "strife" between you, Céline and Richard, you decided to "go for it". You apparently have let the built up emotions of the past few days influence your judgement. Not a good thing to do, but who is innocent among us of never having done the same. Your quest for "truth" is a great hardship (as this demonstrates), but then again, no quest for truth has ever been a bowl of cherries, has it?

I sense that you still believe that you are wronged and that is a concern. Nexus, if Chico has ever been a member of the family here, ought not his concerns concern us all? Is not even a "thorn" (such as I) of value in the quest for learning and growing? If we aren't concerned about Chico's concerns, then who is next that we aren't concerned about? Is there "brotherhood" here or another machine which expends much energy and goes nowhere?

Re: Nexus, we have a problem.

Look guys and gals - the longer this hovers without some positive steps forward it will all kick off again.

The embers are still glowing and one or two just want to fan those flames.

We need to get away from personalities because all we have is wallowing in self, recriminations or justifications which is just going round in circles and everytime we get to pass go instead of £200 cash we are back into the emotional quagmire AGAIN- pretty much everything has been said which needs to be said (at least 3 times) It is all going to kick off again.

At the moment we seem to have two camps - extremes, if you will - maybe we should be looking at ideas for a middle ground

- 1) Laisser faire
- 2) Stricter more prominent boundaries

Is there a third or better way?

Andywight, as we know, recently started a thread which has focused on Céline. I am fairly sure neither Céline nor Richard are very happy with andywight as a result.

Yesterday, that thread was heating up, and Céline was catching some real flak. I had just posted a rather revealing post critical of Céline when, ten minutes later, the entire forum went down.

Had Richard pulled the plug?

After an hour or two, the forum finally came back up (Mods, what happened during that time?). Andywight skyped me, saying he was suffering a great deal of frustration, as he was being blocked from accessing Nexus. He asked me if I was having problems, and I was not. As a test, he suggested I log on using his account. He gave me his log-on name and password to try, which I did, and sure enough, every time I tried to log in as andywight, I too was being blocked. So this problem was being targeted specifically at andywight.

I've seen this little shenanigan before, at Atticus1.

There is an optional mod for Vbulletin called "Miserable Users" designed to do exactly this. The symptoms described are exactly the symptoms andywight experienced. Andy took some screenshots of these symptoms and posted them in the Nexus Group chat. I have copies as well, which I can post.

There is likely only one person familiar enough with Vbulletin to install and use this mod, and that would be Richard. Richard has a history of emotional outbursts whenever his wife Céline is called into question. One shocking example occurred in public on the Avalon forum about a year ago, which resulted in Richard and Céline being kicked off that forum. Another occurred in the Mod Chat room one week ago. I was on the receiving end of that outburst, and I have the chat log saved, should it become necessary to post it.

Richard has been on a mission to have me removed as a moderator ever since that outburst last week. He has made a number of disparaging posts against me playing the "trust" card, some of which I have quoted below.

I think it's clear who cannot be trusted here. Neither Richard or Céline should be at the top of the Nexus pyramid. Any criticism leveled by a Nexus member at moderator Céline can result in underhanded blowback from administrator Richard. And it has, many times. The conflict of interest is enormous and detrimental to the integrity and health of Nexus.

In my opinion, it would be best for both Richard and Céline to step down from their positions before they are removed.

After having time to fully study vbulletins software options it is now clear to me that Chico was correct!

I was clearly put on the "Miserable User List" this is of course would be very hard to prove! which is the beauty of the software.

The very next day my account was not only set to "moderated" but my access to the "Members only section" was stopped.

I received no prior notice of this from the staff, which has been claimed here on numerous occasions by Admins/Mods not to happen! You are supposed to receive a warning first! This did not happen! Several hours later after a member here contacted them on my behalf I was told what had happened.

I never received a warning.

Look, time to get over it - whatever it was for you; (all of you with a prime part in the drama)

Yep, everyone has fu cked up in some respect and ended personally attacking other members/mods/admin, whoever - nobody is an angel and without blame in this sad affair.

Time to sit back, count to ten and zip! - zip! zzzzzzzzip it and put some duct tape over your virtual mouth and start focusing on going forward rather whining around in cyber purgatory.

Re: Nexus, we have a problem.

Your warning was basically verbal/text

You knew full well your actions would get a reaction

as for the techie stuff... I have no clue.. all i know is we were out to diner and richard had to step away from his dinner to help the servers...

Andy... im really sorry all this misunderstanding has happened.

Perhaps one day we can all get passed it... but for now... i for one cant.

I cannot find forgiveness for what you have done (on a personal note)

the forum stuff... oh well... we've all been here before and will probably be there again.

Re: Nexus, we have a problem.

I realize my above post has some veiled venom in it, and I apologize, let me put this all in another context this entire discussion that permeates several threads now is promoted as a free discussion on the merits of an open, planar, non-hierarchical forum vs one that is moderated by a hierarchy with who owns the server, where it is located, who pays for the software, who's monetary accounts are used to pay for it in a hierarchical society, and who assumes the lawful liabilities that can arise being treated as arbitrary issues when in fact they are very real and to be quite honest HUGE a priori concern in just the mere establishment of such a place...this already moves it out of bounds of Utopia, but this is besides the point lets move on this discussion could be happening in a very adult manner in which there is speculation, conjecture, and the listening to and responding to the ideas and commentary to those ideas without negating intelligence, opinion, and experience in the process

but this is not what is happening

what is happening instead is accusation, moves for removing existing mods in no confidence twice now, flames wars, emotionally charged rhetoric, suggestions for volunteer staff to step down, rotating staff, intellectual gladiatorism, and unfair simile and metaphor used as a means of propaganda to convince people of views emotionally, that have failed to do so intellectually all while ignoring those issues in bold above in some form of petri dish discussion of a desired utopia in a sort of disconnect from reality because of the world we live in, and ignoring that we are flawed and emotionally driven despite our desire to be and perhaps assumption to be "evolved" and "enlightened" people because we feel a disconnect to the "sheep"

during these discussions we tend to make assumption convenient to opinions we hold, in other words we take ideas that do not fit within our views comfortably and or supportive of our views in debate and put them up to much more vigorous fact checking and internal debate in which more proof is required for acceptance, than we do those ideas that support our views even though they could be just as flawed and could be discovered to be erroneous we use propaganda to sell our views, we have been programmed well by our controllers and still do it here, I am guilty of it and see others do it also. Chico who is so adamant in how wrong it is, unknowing does it too by the mere postulations that human flaw and error comes into play in the hierarchy, without submitting that the same holds true for those who oppose the hierarchy which is evident in his posts that attack the hierarchy, be it Avalon, Camelot, or Nexus. Mixing truth and lies is dis-information Chico, you always mixed the two up in your earlier threads.

Propaganda is a form of communication that is aimed at influencing the attitude of a community toward some cause or position so as to benefit oneself or one's group. (source) So in its most base form, even metaphor and simile can be viewed as such, and we are all guilty for it in principle. What determines whether it is right, wrong or manipulative is based on the thesis verses the accepted values of a given community and the divergence which can be seen between the two.

We do this because we are flawed human beings and there are no benevolent leaders here, no philosopher kings despite the desire for them and instead we have the only means of existence available: a flawed method of communication run by flawed people, hosting more flawed people discussing flawed premises in a flawed manner. Perfection if found in beauty, and this is the perfect place for me.

(A line from the Layer Cake movie)

This is a forum, and one that operates fairly well compared to others in terms of Moderation and controlling of.

There are 320 active members presently...put these same people in any other situation, the work place, the government, whale protection, the sports field, an off the grid community, crochet class or a tea towel folding factory, and anything else you can think of...the same dynamics will occur. Why? We are Human beings.

Some here appear to be under the impression that we should be striving for perfection...that is not going to happen, not in your lifetime, your children's or your Grandchildren's.

Human beings (CURRENTLY) are not capable of such fancies...we are flawed, sometimes loving and beautiful, sometimes complete idiots...

Accept that condition but continue to strive towards a better understanding of how to get along, for without that we are destined to repeat the ways of our forefathers...insanity.

Peace to all of you imperfect beings...and I sit amongst you, imperfect and flawed but always trying to become a better person, for myself and humanity...just like the rest of you...I hope.

All my above views are subject to scrutiny due to the fact they have been written by an imperfect being.

Peace

Ross

Re: Nexus, we have a problem.

You know - If you put it in perspective - the things we have in common is a realization that the world is full of evil ba stards starting wars and famine creating poverty allowing disease to run rampant and poisoning minds, creating race hate, religious hate and any other kind of hate and sh it you can think of and all that is happening here is people whining about, in the grand scheme of things, VERY TRIVIAL CRAP.

Pffft! - going for a brew and a sh it umbrella

Re: Nexus, we have a problem.

Nothing is a problem till thinking makes it so.
There is tremendous freedom in not having to be right.
Nexus we have a solution---- Change the gramophone record. (when you find yourself in a hole stop digging)
Find something interesting and positive to discuss might perhaps be the answer.

DECEPTION! DISENGAGE! I asked to be on the "Miserably User List" but I'm still seeing this □□□ing discussion on my screen. I guess the mods have a double or triple agenda for not putting me on the list. I WANT MY MONEY BACK!

Andy... im really sorry all this misunderstanding has happened.

Perhaps one day we can all get passed it... but for now... i for one cant.

I cannot find forgiveness for what you have done (on a personal note)

the forum stuff... oh well... we've all been here before and will probably be there again.

Celine, I certainly don't recall any "verbal;text" warning me of anything, could you please post the logs of this, you have my permission.

Re: Nexus, we have a problem.

On the bright side of this continuing matter, I find that the ideal time to find out who one's true friends really are is when the chips are down and you're in trouble. The phonies will either disappear into the background or actually make things worse, while the friends will be right at your side.

Cheers,
Fred
